MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

In August, while some holdings were impacted by the dollar depreciation, the fund underperformed its benchmark. Companies like Gym Group – good earning release – or Ryanair – competitor Air Berlin filed for bankruptcy – helped performance but some companies were a burden like Reckitt Benckiser – worries about the company's growth. We took advantage of a sharply declining stock price to invest again in Paddy Power Belfair (UK, £6bn).

Paddy Power is the leader on the growing online gaming industry in its two main markets, the UK (15% market share) and Australia (23% market share). These two countries represent more than 80% of revenues. The merger with Belfair in 2015 allowed Paddy Power to both realize synergies and increase its exposure to high-potential countries like Italy in which the company was quite weak.

In our view, the decline in the share price already includes all the risks linked to the potential tax increase in the UK and Australia as well as the CEO change. Indeed, the Paddy Power brand is strong and the underlying market is growing. Furthermore, getting back to high, normalized level of growth following a transition 2017 year (change of platform) should allow the company to trade back in line with historical multiples.

Paddy Power enjoys a very strong balance sheet (£200m net cash, c3.5% of market cap). This will empower the company to pursue value accretive strategies – M&A, distributing cash to shareholder with buybacks or special dividends.

We took advantage of the decline in the markets to invest in several companies. September, with its numerous conferences, will be a good occasion for us to meet with several management teams, investigate new cases or come back to previously studied companies.
